Herrick. Thomas Whittaker, publisher, has nearly ready "English Cathedrals; Their Architecture, Symbolism and History," compiled by Miss E. W. Boyd, of Albany. It will be a concise hand-book, appropriately illustrated.

Parts XVII. and XVIII. of "The Dictionary of Music and Musicians," by Sir George Grove, published by Macmilian & Co., bring the work down to the close of the third volume. Alphabetically, the Dictionary has reached the letter S and will be completed in another volume. M ISS HAINES AND MLLE. DE JANON and MLLE. DE JANON LE JANON LE DE JANON LE JANON LE

The frontispiece of the September Century will be a striking portrait of Robert Burns, after a daguerreotype in the possession of Mr. Edmund Clarence Stedman, which was taken from a minature belonging to Burns's sister. The next installment of "The Bread-Winners," the new anonymous serial begun in the August Century, will describe a Spiritualist

The August number of "Forestry," under its new editor. Francis George Heath, devotes considerable space to an article on "The Alarming Destruction of American Forests," written by Mr. William Little, of Montreal. Mr. Little seems to have underestimated the amount of white pine still standing in the United States, but his figures will help to call attention to the need that exists for placing our valuable lumber interests on a sound basis.

G. P. Putnam's Sons have issued a second edition of Mr. H. F. McDermott's poems, which originally appeared in The Jersey City Berald and other publications in New-York and elsewhere. The collection s entitled "The Blind Canary," and is printed in a neat volume, which is ornamented with an admira-ble steel portrait of the author. Additions and revisions have been made in this edition. The admirers of McDermott's work, as originally pubwill doubtless be glad to have it in this conrenient shape. That there are a good many of them is shown by the call for a second edition.

The August number of The Bibliographer seems fully up to the average of this "journal of book lore," T. Fairman Ordish contributes an historical sketch of Chambers's Journal, and there are articles by H. B. Wheatley on "Mr. Quaritch's Catalogue of Bookbinders," L. A. Wheatley on "Christopher Plantin and the Plantin Museum," the fourth part of "Foreign Protestant Liturgies" by Jessie Young, D. G. Goodwin on "London Booksellers' Signs," etc. The Antiquary, also received from Bouton, has several articles of a curious historical interest. Among these, "Public Rights in the Thames" by Hubert Hall, a description of a rock-hewn Greek monastery in Apolias by the Rev. H. F. Tozer, and "Simon de Montfort and the English Parliament," by the Rev. Wentworth Webster.

THE BOOK AGENT.

THE BOCK AGENT.

From Texas Strings.

We used to think that the book agent was a mercenary miscreant—a fiend in human form, wrose stock in trade was brazen cheek, a command of second-hand language, and the prospectus of an illustrated bock in twelve monthly parts. We confess that we believed him to be a bold, bad mae, steeped in iniquity and lost to shame. We even wrote of him, and printed what we shame. We even wrote of him, and printed what we called humarous articles, in which we described how he worked on the feelings of his landlady and scattered cloquence all over the house, from attic to cellar, notil she was persuaded to purchase a $7 copy of Civil Engineering in Five Easy Lessons, and we told how when old Fulerum refused to buy the Female Beauties of the Eighteenth Century, and sicked the agent down the front steps, he found him five minutes afterward in the kitchen selling a Book of Business Forms to the bired girl.

But we have had an awakening. We have experienced a change of heart toward the book agent since we have given his peculiar usefulness in the economy of nature more mature consideration, and since we have a book written by ourselves now being soid by subscription and by book agent. Our conscience stings us for what we may have said in the past that may have have an accommendation of the following disseminator of intelligence and second-hand wood-cut illustrations. He is an exemplary citizen. He bears the proud man's contunnely with equanimity, while he induces him to buy a leather-bound edition of the Eucyclopædia Britannica, which not only instructs him, but affords him an excellent thing to strop his razer on.

He Soes out into the country and tackles the agricul-on.

He goes out into the country and tackles the agriculturist in his lair, and sells him The Diseases of the Horse and their Cure, in one volume—a book without which the farmer might go down to his grave ignorant that his borse had several diseases with long Latin names. the farmer might go decayes with long Latin names. The book agent ministers to the rich and poor alike. He calls on the mechanic's wife and sells her Every Ludy Her Own Cook, a book containing 1,000 useful recipes, with a collection of Latin and Greek phrases in an appendix; a book that will teach her how to construct a rhubarb ple or build a hard-builed doughnut, and that rhubarb ple or build a hard-builed doughnut, and that will store her mind with choice aphorians in the dead languages while she is waiting for a cake to rise.

Now that several thousand book agents are tramping over the country offering our book for sale, we regard it over the present oversights of the last Legislature

Now that several the control of the last Legislature one of the greatest oversights of the last Legislature that it failed to pass a law making its felony to use rude language to a book agent. The members of the Legislature would have carried the everlasting respect of all classes of offices in they had tendered a money subsidy to every book agent who visits the State on his mission of mercy and disinterested benevolence. Parents should instruct their children to watch out, and if they see a man whom they suspect of being a book agent, invite him to come to the neuse and take dinner. When a book agent is expected to arrive at a place, the Mayor and leading citizens should have the decement to meet him at the depot with garlands and a brass band meet him at the depot with garlands and a brass band.

Perchance some captions person, lost in sin and wickedness, and unable to find his way out, will intimate that we are a little too liberal in our proposed treatment of book agents. To all such we say: We don't propose to say anything to them. Let them encreise a little patience, and the book agent himself, with a copy of our Mustang, will say something to them. He will tell them, in a low, soothing tone of voice, of its 700 pages, its 300 original illustrations, its peliucid wit, its chaste statistics, its giddy humor, and its wealth of canned information about fexus and Mexico, and as they subscribe for a cloth-bound copy, with a gold-plated picture on the cover, they will call down blessings on the head of the man who invented the book agent.
